Tranzap Recognized as a Top Software Development Company

DENVER and HOUSTON – April 11, 2013 - Tranzap, Inc., the parent company of Oildex, the pioneer developer of cloud-based smart information management solutions for the energy industry, is pleased to announce it was selected by the Denver Business Journal as one of the top Denver-area software development companies.

Based on revenue, Tranzap was ranked the top sixth software developer in the region. A series of strategic growth initiatives executed by the company's Board of Directors and President and CEO, Richard Slack, contributed to Tranzap's revenue growth and achievement.

In addition to its heritage as a leading energy industry technology service provider, over the course of the last year, specifically, Tranzap bolstered its position as a technology leader. The company developed and released new products to the market, closed hundreds of new customers and processed record data transactions through its system. Furthermore, Tranzap remains compliant with industry data standards and data processing assurances and delivers clear value to its customers through its financial data platform.

"Tranzap is delighted to be recognized as one of the top software development companies in the region," said Michael Corbett, Vice President Marketing of Oildex. "This recognition is a testimony to Tranzap's many accomplishments over the last year and is due to the hard work and dedication of its team and the company's commitment to the oil and gas industry."
